On the 23d and 24th of June I visited the averas county, accompanied by Brother J. D. Blain and Brother H. Bland and lady .-We reached the grove at 4 P. M. on the 23d, and put up at the "Mammoth Tree Grove House," the only public, indeed the only dwelling-house at the grove. A semi-weekly paper, entitled the "Big Tree Bulletin and Murphy's Advertiser," is edited and printed on the stump of what is called the big tree, though it is not by any means the largest tree in the grove. There are ninety-six of these wonderful trees French and English Merinoss, Worsted Plaids in a circuit of about one mile. These trees Debeges, Lavella Cloths, Alpaccas, Hooped do not stand alone, but in a forest of large Skirts; Broche, Stella, and Printed Shawls and | trees, generally pine and cedars. The levelled stump forms the floor of an arbor, in which, as stated above, is the editing and printing office of the Big Tree Bulletin. The butt log, some thirty feet long, lies on the ground, and is ascended by a neat stairway of twenty-six steps. The trees are perhaps all named .-Besides those above mentioned there are the "Two Guards," "The three Graces," "The Twins," "Hercules," "The Hermit," "The Beauty of the Forest," &c. A STORY WITH A MORAL. The Bucyrus (Ohio) Journal tells a story of D. and J., two verdant gentlemen of that place, who went to Cieveland in company .-On arriving there, D. proposed a spree, but J., being satisfied with seeing the lions thought it best to forego a visit to the elephants. Accordingly, D. started off alone leaving his watch and a considerable amount session before, J. felt keenly the greatness the responsibility imposed upon him. He passed a sleepless night, meditating on the mishaps that might befall the reckless D .-His concern was not diminished the next morning on finding that the reveller had not returned, and the thought fisshed across his mind that if he was murdered the possession of his watch and money would direct suspicion upon him! As the bours were away and brought no D. with them, his anguish and fear gave place to desperation, and, rushing to the lake side, he harled the evidence of the anticipated crime into the water. Hardly had he returned to his hotel when D. entered. Mantilla Shawls, Sack Flannels, all colors bearing the marks of a protracted spree, and Misses Mousline Robes, &c., &c. of its occasional concomitant, a fight. He had become involved in a broil, locked up in a watch-house, and fined, and he wanted his money. The scene that ensued was more exciting than agreeable to either party; but a compromise was finally effected, and the two returned to the rural district impressed with the conviction that though it may be sometimes agreeable to go on a spree, it is not always very pleasant work to get over it. RECEEN JOHNSTON WIll be voted for as Alderman, to supply the vacancy in the Fourth Ward, occasioned by the resignation of T. B.
